The millennial bathroom

Hands-free loo seats to end the battle of the sexes to massaging bath tubs for an at-home spacation—smart bathrooms are here to stay, finds ADITI GAITONDE FERNANDES

◀BEDAZZLING BATHS

Gessi's Private Wellness collection at FCML India features square shower heads that combine a hydro massage with chromatherapy for a multi-sensorial experience. Their Rettangolo faucet and Jaquar's HydroLite shower head both have water-sensitive colour-changing LED lights to calm and soothe.

▶SINGING SHOWERS

Playing the right note by combining water flow, lights and music, Grohe's Rainshower F-Series 40 AquaSymphony system customises the shower with the help of their phone app. Kohler, too, has been experimenting with music in the shower, the most popular being Moxie—a shower head that's a wireless speaker that belts out over seven hours of music and news in one charge. Another product is their VibrAcoustic bath tubs, where the water vibrates to the beat of the music.

◀CONNECTED CABINS

Along with the infusion of healing colours is the entry of the touch pad. Take the Artize Showertronic N6. The waterproof touchpad controls the shower mode, temperature, water flow and even remembers the user's favourite settings. And the brand's 2.0 sauna and steam cabins come complete with remotes, chromatherapy and MP3 connectors.

◀TECH THRONES

Hi-tech toilet seats with hands-free operation are creating one of the most hygienic of all bathroom trends. The V-care range of WCs by Vitra lets the user control the temperature of the seat and the water pressure. Roca's Smart Toilet Collection allows you to control various functions of the water closet—opening and shutting of the flap, self-cleaning nozzle—via a phone app. ■
